World Jewish Congress Issues Report On Liquidation Of Communal Life By Communists In Rumania

The story of the Communization of Rumanian Jewry, one of the largest Jewish communities in post-war Europe, was told in a 30-page report issued by the Institute of Jewish Affairs of the World Jewish Congress. The study, entitled Rumanian Jewry in the Post-War Period, reported that the entire Zionist movement in Rumania has been liquidated, that other major national Jewish organizations have been forced to disband and that Jewish community life is now exclusively in the hands of the "Jewish Democratic Committee," a small group of Communists and other leftists. Dozens of Zionist and other Jewish leaders are under arrest.

Jewish charities have been nationalized, synagogues have been forced to reorganize according to the dictates of the government, schools have been nationalized and must teach in accordance with "the progressive spirit of the age," and cultural bodies have been compelled virtually to abandon their normal activity and concentrate on spreading Communist ideology.

In tracing the recent development of Rumanian Jewry, the report pointed out that the Jewish community, which had lost some 385,000 members as a result of Nazi persecution and had declined by more than one-half to a post-war population of 375,000, was convinced in the first days after the war that a new era of freedom had begun. Anti-Semitic decrees of pre-war Fascist governments were abrogated. The democratic constitution, recognizing Jews as equal citizens, was proclaimed. [redacted] and the Jews worked for their rehabilitation with admirable vigor and diligence," the report said. Jewish synagogues and religious and communal organizations were revived, hospitals and homes for the aged were reopened, dozens of schools were established, sixteen Jewish periodicals sprang up. Jewish businessmen rebuilt their firms relatively quickly, while Jewish workers, though caught in an inflationary spiral, found jobs. As the Communists tightened their hold on the country and transformed the Kingdom of Rumania into the "Rumanian People's Republic," however, the Jewish situation underwent a fundamental change. The Jewish Democratic Committee, weapon of the Communists, set out to capture the Jewish organizational structure and to crush the opposition.

Thus, a campaign was launched against Dr. William Filderman, well-known leader of Rumanian Jewry during the 30 previous years, who had been persecuted by the Nazis but continued to fight against them. Although he was president of the Federation of Jewish Communities (and highly respected), he disappeared from the political scene in 1946 and the Federation became impotent.

The Zionists, who had the support of a large section of the Rumanian Jewry, two-thirds, according to one report, were next. The Jewish Party, Zionism's political arm, which had elected two deputies to Parliament in the 1946 elections, decided under attack to disband "because its aims had been achieved." The WJCongress report commented that "the conclusion is inescapable that it did so under duress." The Jewish Democratic Committee then forced two major Zionist fund-raising organizations, the Jewish National Fund and the Jewish Foundation Fund, to share the proceeds of collections with it.

In December, 1948, the Central Committee of the Rumanian Workers' (Communist) Party adopted a resolution condemning Zionism as "a reactionary political movement of the Jewish bourgeois which [redacted] Within the framework of the Jewish Democratic Committee, the Zionists have engaged in acts of sabotage." Therefore, the Jewish Democratic Committee, in a series of purges, eliminated all Zionists, including leftists, from its membership. Committee "activists" invaded the offices of various Zionist groups in Bucharest, smashed furniture and destroyed equipment. The Zionists after asking in vain for police protection, attempted to protect their offices themselves and an actual struggle occurred which lasted one week. Realizing that the battle was in vain, the governing board of the official Zionist Organization adopted a resolution to suspend activities.

Soon afterwards, training farms for Zionist youths planning to live a pioneering agricultural life in Israel were closed by the authorities on a variety of pretexts. Tools were confiscated for alleged use on nearby farms, buildings were closed because they allegedly violated sanitary regulations.

Persecution of Zionists and other non-Communist Jewish leaders has continued. In 1950, forty Zionist leaders were arrested on charges of espionage and sabotage. In the summer of 1951, about 100 Jewish leaders were reported arrested. That Rumanian policy has not softened was indicated, a WJC official pointed out, by reports from Israel that more than 140 additional Zionist leaders were arrested during recent weeks.

Economically, the position of the Jews deteriorated quickly. About one-third of Rumania's Jews were members of the middle-class, and many suffered when industries were nationalized without compensation to their former owners. The report estimated that about 100,000 Jews were affected by these measures. The Communists proposed to absorb these people into the national economy by "vocational readjustment" but even a key official of the Democratic Committee later admitted that efforts in this direction had failed.

In a new development, the government decided in 1951 to nationalize 18 Jewish hospitals, 8 lying-in hospitals, 30 dispensaries, 27 homes for the aged, and other institutions. Jewish schools were also nationalized, and Jewish religious congregations were deprived of control over them. The congregations themselves were the subject of a Statute for the Organization of the Mosaic Faith which provided that only one Jewish congregation could exist in each city. Thus, congregations worshipping in different ways, such as the Orthodox and reform congregations, were compelled to merge into a single unit.

In the cultural field, a country-wide Jewish cultural organization called the Ikuf tried in the first years after the war to publish and popularize the classic works of Yiddish literature. After a number of "self-criticisms," however, it abandoned the Jewish field almost entirely and devoted its efforts to the propagation of Communist dogma. "In these conditions," the WJCongress report said, "the cultural life of the Jews has become stagnant and monolithic."

Since 1948, as a result of all these developments, the Jewish population of Rumania has declined steadily, until today it stands at about 200,000. In 1946-47, some 87,000 Jews are estimated to have left Rumania illegally, they could not leave legally, by stealing across the Hungarian, Polish, and Austrian borders, with the displaced persons camps of Austria and Germany as their goal. Israel Asks Soviet To Let Jews Emigrate

Prime Minister David Ben-Gurion read the Knesset (Parliament) the text of a note sent to the Soviet Union, assuring the Kremlin that Israel would not join any aggressive pact against the Soviet Union and asking the Russians to permit Soviet Jews to migrate to Israel.

"Israel has never agreed, and will not agree, to support any aggressive plans aimed against the U. S. S. R., or any other peace-loving country," the note said. It was delivered in Moscow December 8, and constituted a reply to a Soviet note of November 21 on the question of Israel's attitude toward the Middle Eastern command proposed by the West.

Israel's answer, as read by Mr. Ben-Gurion, was that the Government had never formulated its views about the proposed command because the question of Israeli membership had never arisen.

Israel has not been invited to join the projected command. However, the note added, the sponsoring powers assured her that their intentions were not aggressive.

"Israel has guarded, and will continue to guard with all its power * * * its national independence and sovereignty," the missive emphasized in an obvious repudiation of the Communist charge that Israel had sold her independence to the United States for economic aid.

The note also asked the great powers to take action to remove the threat of the Arab states to Israel, and criticized the Soviet press for repeatedly having published falsehoods about Israel's turning over bases to foreign powers, according to the New York Times.

With regard to Jewish emigration from the Soviet Union, the note declared that the welfare of Diaspora Jewry in their homelands was Israel's cardinal aim. It added that Moscow's ban on such emigration was inconsistent with the Soviet policy of full equality and the right of self-determination for all nations.

In another development, Meir Argov, chairman of the Foreign Affairs Committee, said that the Government was taking diplomatic steps to protest against the arrest of Zionist leaders in Rumania.

Three Faiths Honour Priest For Social Justice Work

Seven hundred persons—Protestant, Roman Catholic and Jewish—and men who are leaders in business, the law, labor unions and other professions, paid tribute in New York to the Rev. John LaFarge, S. J. He was described as a man who has dedicated his life to God as a Jesuit priest and has attempted as both man and priest to make practical and real the ideal that all men are created equal.

The specific honor was a testimonial dinner at the Starlight Roof of the Waldorf-Astoria to mark the twenty-five years that Father LaFarge has been an editor of "America," the Catholic weekly. To many of his admirers, the occasion provided a chance to tell the priest that they appreciated his efforts to bring racial justice and civil rights to all people.

Father LaFarge is an optimist who believes that discrimination against Negroes will come to an end in "our lifetime," and looks upon the "apparent conflict" between Catholics and Protestants as a temporary manifestation, says the New York Herald Tribune.

Judge John F. X. McGohey, of United States District Court, was toastmaster, and introduced the speakers, who included Dr. Louis Finkelstein, chancellor of the Jewish Theological Seminary of America; Ralph Hunn, president of the Liturgical Arts Society; Viggo F. E. Rambusch, of St. Ansgar's Scandinavian Catholics League, and A. Philip Randolph, international president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, who talked about Father LaFarge's work among Negroes who were not Catholics. Also paying tribute to Father LaFarge were Judge Harold A. Stevens, of Georgetown University, who spoke for the Catholic Interracial Council; the Rev. Gerald F. Yates, S. J., dean of the graduate school of Georgetown University, and the Rev. Robert C. Hartnett, S. J., editor in chief of "America."

Present at the dinner were the most Rev. James H. Griffiths, chancellor of the military ordinariate; the Right Rev. Cornelius J. Drew, pastor of St. Charles Borromeo Roman Catholic Church, who represented Francis Cardinal Spellman; Dr. Samuel McCrea Cavert, general secretary of the National Council of Churches of Christ in the U.S.A.; the Right Rev. Anson Phelps Stokes, of Lenox, Mass., former canon of the Protestant Episcopal Cathedral in Washington, and Dr. Everett R. Clinchy, president of the National Conference of Christians and Jews.

Thomas E. Murray, a member of the Atomic Energy Commission, who was chairman of the dinner, presented a gold chalice to Father LaFarge to be used in what the priest considers the most important work of each day — the celebration of mass, says the Herald Tribune.

In responding to the tributes paid him, Father LaFarge, seventy-one, said he has not always heard nice things about his various activities. "I was bluntly told at one time that I was a friend of lost causes," he remarked. "But tonight's tribute witnesses to the fact that these were anything but lost causes."

On the state of religion, Father LaFarge said he was convinced that more and more intelligent leaders in the United States are coming "to recognize that respect for religion and the practice of religion are the keystone in the arch of human freedom."

U.S., Israel Agree On Terms To Administer Aid, Total Now $223,455,000

By an exchange of notes at the Israeli Foreign Ministry the United States and Israel agreed on the terms under which $50,000,000 of United States aid for refugees' relief and resettlement will be administered. More than half of this sum has, in fact, already been spent. An additional $15,000,000 has been allocated to Israel under the heading of technical and economic assistance.

In contrast to the detailed agreement with European countries drawn up by Economic Cooperation Administration, the notes set forth only the general terms under which United States representatives will approve projects in Israel; and Israel establish a counterpart fund in Israeli currency. The main points of agreement with Israel in the note, signed by United States Ambassador Monnett Davis, were the following, says the New York Times:

First, Israel, in accordance with the Mutual Security Act, will join the United States "in promoting international understanding and good-will and in maintaining world peace" and will take such action to "eliminate the causes of international tension" as the two countries may agree upon.

Second, in support of each request for funds Israel will furnish such information as the United States Government asks for and Israel will give the United States representatives "full opportunity to ascertain the uses made of the funds * * * including access to the pertinent books and records covering the expenditure of such funds, access to contracts and other documents relating thereto, and an opportunity to examine and inspect the projects financed by such funds."

Third, Israel will pay into a counterpart fund the equivalent in Israel pounds of the dollar aid given. The exchange rate used will vary according to the commodities involved and in compliance with the new exchange rates recently announced. Thus about half the aid remaining to be expended will be credited in a counterpart fund at the rate of one pound to the dollar, while most of the rest will be credited at the rate of $1.40 to the pound.

Aid funds already expended totaling $25,730,000 will be credited at the old exchange rate of $2.80 to the pound. The counterpart fund will be expended

Reducing the number of in-between-meal snacks especially those candies, cakes, pastries and soft drinks, will help to prevent dental caries. Sweets should be eaten only with regular meals. Then, immediately after eating, the teeth should be brushed to remove food particles that form acids in the mouth. If brushing is not possible, raw solid-fleshed fruit will help, if eaten right after a meal.

Fashioned with a tulle illusion inset neckline, trimmed with tiny seed-pearl beads, her gown of egg-shell shade had long sleeves, pointed over the hands; a tightly-fitted bodice, and a full, lace skirt, worn over a tulle-illusion hooped underskirt, and a satin slip, shaping into a long train. She had a lace cap trimmed with seed-pearl beading, with a matching illusion tulle fingertip-length veil, and carried a white prayer-book, with orchids. Miss Myrna Joy Stein, cousin of the bride, of Detroit, was maid of honor. She wore a cornflower-blue illusion-net dress, trimmed with iridescent sequins, and pearl-beading on the bodice, made with an ankle-length skirt. Her bouquet was of red roses. Miss Arlene Kollenberg, sister of the groom, was a bridesmaid, wearing a peacock-blue illusion net dress, trimmed with scattered rhinestones on the bodice and matching stole, which was ankle-length. Her bouquet was of yellow roses. Edwin Gittleman, cousin of the groom, was best man; and Fred Mogell, another cousin, was an usher. Cantor Fenakel sang "Because", accompanied by Miss Florence Weintraub. Receiving at the Ballroom of the Hotel, Mrs. Ginsberg, mother of the bride, wore a mauve-rose-shaded crepe ankle-length gown, trimmed with lace along the neckline, and on the sleeves and bodice, with a side-draped skirt; and had an orchid corsage. Mrs. Kollenberg, mother of the groom, wore a pink crepe ankle-length gown, embroidered throughout with a floral pattern of iridescent sequins; and had an orchid corsage. The bride and groom left by plane for New York, for their wedding trip, the bride travelling in a navy-blue and pink corded suit; with a pink floral hat, and navy-blue accessories. They are residing at 13141 LaSalle Boulevard, Detroit. Mr. and Mrs. Reuben Ginsberg, of London, Ont.; Mr. and Mrs. David Gaines, of Hamilton, Ont.; Mr. and Mrs. Jack Friedland, of Toronto, Ont.; and Mr. and Mrs. Jay Geller and Mr. and Mrs. Morton Soble, of Windsor, Ont., were wedding guests.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a floor-length gown of white Chantilly lace. It had a high neckline and Peter Pan collar which buttoned to the waist in the back, long tight sleeves coming to points at the wrists, a tight-fitted bodice, shaped into a point, and a lace, net, and taffeta crinoline skirt, terminating in a long train. Her fingertip veil of tulle illusion was held in place by a crown embroidered with a rhinestones and seed-pearl beads, and she carried a white ivory prayer book covered with two white orchids and white streamers. Mrs. A. Mandell, cousin of the groom, of Philadelphia, Pa., was matron of honor. She wore a short evening gown of light-blue nylon net over satin, made with a wide skirt, and had a matching Juliet cap with a short veil of tulle illusion. Her colonial bouquet was of yellow roses. The bridesmaids were: Misses Shirley Blacker and Ella May, both of Montreal, in blue nylon net over satin gowns; and Misses Elaine Fleischer and Myra Goldstein, both of Philadelphia, in green nylon net over satin, with Juliet caps, with matching veils of tulle illusion, and colonial bouquets of Delight roses. Bernard B. Rush, brother of the groom, of Philadelphia, was best man. The ushers were: Herbert Cooperman, Marvin Mullen, Robert Grossman, Frank Daitcher, all of Philadelphia. Two gates, decorated with gladioli, arches of white and pink roses, palm trees and candelabra were used to decorate the canopy, hall, and aisles. The wedding march was played and "All The Things You Are" was sung. A reception took place, the tables being adorned with centerpieces of roses and gladioli. Mrs. Dolman was in a paddy-green crepe floor-length gown, scattered with rhinestones, with a matching green velvet hat, and silver-coloured accessories. Mrs. Rush was in light-blue crepe floor-length gown, with a tulle hat, and pink accessories. Their corsages were of white orchids. The bride and groom spent their honeymoon in Pocono Mountains, Pa., the bride travelling in a grey gabardine suit, trimmed with black velvet collar, a light-blue cocktail hat, trimmed with black beads and black veil, black accessories, and a brown muskrat coat. They are living in Philadelphia. Misses Shirley Blacker and Ella May, Abram Nozacs, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Steinberg, uncle and aunt of the bride; Stanley Steinberg, her cousin; Mrs. Pauline Geffin, her aunt; and Mr. and Mrs. Max Nueman, her uncle and aunt; all of Montreal; Benjamin Isaacman, uncle of the bride, and Reverend B. Zarachov, of Brooklyn, N. Y.; Mrs. Esther Coran and Miss Pearl Coran, cousins of the bride, of Long Island, N. Y., were wedding guests.

The Bnai Brith Hillel Foundations bought the present Swiss Consulate building in Jerusalem as quarters for the Hillel Foundation at the Hebrew University, it was announced by Rabbi Arthur J. Lelyveld, National Hillel Director, who returned from Israel and Switzerland where he concluded negotiations for the purchase of the building, in the Talbieh quarter opposite the present headquarters of the University. With its main campus occupied by the Arab Legion, the Hebrew University has been conducting classes in twenty scattered buildings throughout the new city of Jerusalem and can offer no facilities for extra-curricular activities to its 2,000 students.

The celebrated letter of Maimonides to the Jews of Yemen will appear shortly under the imprint of the American Academy for Jewish Research, according to Dr. Saul Lieberman, Professor of Palestinian Literature and Institutions at The Jewish Theological Seminary of America, and president of the Academy. This will be the first time that this historical epistle, written by the 12th century philosopher, physician and Talmudic sage, has ever appeared in a critical edition. It is edited by Dr. Abraham S. Halkin, of City College of New York. Beginning early this year, the Academy will publish ancient texts in partnership with the Israeli Government.

The amount of meat specified for a balanced diet need not consist of actual meat. Substitutes that are more economical are just as efficient. Eggs, cheddar cheese, milk, fish and peanut butter are all good sources of protein. Their cost ranges from four to eight cents per average portion as against anywhere up to sixty cents a portion for meat.

YIVO TO ESTABLISH U.S. ARCHIVES ON JEWS

In connection with the 25th anniversary conference of Yivo, the Yiddish Scientific Institute, which took place in New York in January, Yivo has launched a program of systematic and large-scale activities leading to the establishment of a central archive of documents and materials on the history and problems of the Jewish community in America, with particular emphasis on the past eighty years, that is, from the beginning of the mass immigration of Eastern European Jews to date.

There are two reasons for this emphasis: The period under consideration has been generally neglected, both from the point of view of gathering the materials bearing on it and from the point of view of evaluating them in the form of a history. And it is precisely in this period that there has taken place the steady rise of the American Jewish community to a position of central prominence in Jewish life, due primarily to the large immigration of Eastern European Jews.

American Jewish historiography has been limited hitherto, largely, to studies of Sephardic Jews who had played a role in colonial days or German Jewish immigrants who had arrived prior to 1880. The two million-odd Eastern European Jews who have arrived in the past eighty years have aroused but little interest among Jewish historians in America, notwithstanding the fact that their economic and cultural achievements fairly rival those of their German or Sephardic predecessors.

The object of Yivo at present is twofold: To retrieve and preserve some of the precious materials bearing on the history of the Eastern European Jews in America, especially its early years, and to gather and preserve the materials reflecting the current Jewish scene. Yivo summons all friends and organizations to take an active part in gathering materials and documents bearing on the history and problems of the Jewish community in America. All friends of Yivo wishing to participate in this enterprise are requested to notify the office of Yivo of their intention in writing. Detailed instruction on the methods and techniques of gathering materials will then be forwarded to them.

Lionel Hampton, noted American band leader, has assigned all royalties from the sales of his newest recording which features two songs of Israel content, to ZOA projects in the State of Israel. Dedicated to Israel, the new MGM recording features him Hampton and his orchestra with choral accompaniment and with the band leader himself at the xylophone. "Shalom! Shalom!" is a modern version of the popular Israel folk song, "Anu Banu Artza." On the reverse of the record is an original song entitled "Hannah! Hannah!" Both songs have been favorably received in the world of popular music and are being "plugged" by disc jockeys on the air.

Cheese, that excellent substitute for meat, can be served in a great many ways. Half a pound of cheese provides as much protein as is found in a pound of average meat. Pound for pound, there is nearly as much protein in cheese as there is in eggs. Easy to digest and adaptable to many recipes, cheese is also lower in price than many other foods.

URGES PREJUDICED TO TALK OUT HOSTILITY

Anti-Semitism can best be combatted by encouraging prejudiced persons to "talk out their prejudice under competent guidance and proper environment," Rabbi Henry E. Kagan of Sinai Temple, Mount Vernon, N. Y., said in New York. Rabbi Kagan, who also is an instructor in psychological guidance at Teachers College, Columbia University, spoke at a luncheon given by the National Conference of Christians and Jews at the Columbia University Club, 4 West Forty-third Street.

The speaker, whose book, "Changing the Attitude of Christian Toward Jew," was just published, by the Columbia University Press, said the "informational approach" to anti-Semitism was inadequate. He defined this approach as the popular technique of stressing the common ideals of Judaism and Christianity and emphasizing the contribution of Jews to civilization.

"Once a hostile feeling is expressed," he declared, "a certain amount of animosity can be replaced with healthier, more truly Christian feelings."

There are twelve countries whose infant mortality rates are lower than Canada's. To improve Canada's standing, every expectant mother should be given regular medical attention, either by her doctor or the prenatal clinic. She will be advised on the diet that is important to her health and her child's and also on the amount and kind of exercise she should take.

Purim Reflections

"If all the festivals should pass away, the days of Purim would still remain." (From the Piyut for the Sabbath of Remembrance)

The Jewish holydays have been tremendous factors in the dramatic story of Jewish survival and revival. When darkness and despair descended upon Israel and threatened to overwhelm the Jewish people, the holydays imbued the Jews with hope. When enemies assailed the Jew, the holydays served as sources of strength. The victories of the spirit which the sacred days commemorated enabled the Jew to face the future, the uncertain future, by recalling the glorious past. Happily, the Midrash points out that the holydays are to be compared "to a Doctor with a kit-full of restoratives."

Certainly the feast of Purim has ever proven to be of therapeutic value. It has provided above all laughter to the Jewish people. Who can deny the great value of laughter among humans in order to release tensions and give balance to life? The laughter which comes to the Jew on Purim is a strange laughter of a people that refuses to recognize the possibility of defeat. It is the laughter which at the same time is a cry of defiance against all the Hamans of history and at the same time an affirmation of faith in the ultimate victory of righteousness.

Despite archaeologists who often find fault with the Purim story and question the authenticity of the Book of Esther, the Jewish folk-spirit ever found Purim real, and whenever a Jewish community was saved from danger it commemorated its deliverance by a local Purim imitation of the national Purim. Thus the pages of Jewish history record such local Purims as the Purim of Cairo, the Purim of Frankfurt, the Purim of Padua, and the "Powder Purim" in the city of Vilna. And who does not rejoice in the new importance Purim has taken on in the State of Israel! In the modern Synagogue, too, in particular in the Reform Synagogue, a new Purim ritual and a new Purim Megillah have been published, demonstrating the love for Purim amid historic change and Jewish tradition.

Because of Jewish historical experiences, Purim is historically a genuine festival. The events of Purim reflect that which repeatedly takes place in our midst and in every generation. The story is constantly being reenacted. We of the Jewish faith have come to look upon the world as a powerful novel in which a divine plot is working itself out. What is the theme of this great novel? It is the power of the spirit of God which governs events, rather than "the spirit of the power" of men.

The characters of the Book of Esther, constitute patterns for all times. From Haman down to Hitler of our own day, it is "reason of unreason" which constitutes a cause of this foul thing called anti-Semitism.

Mordecai is the role of the eternal Jew in history. Alas, the Jew has witnessed civilizations rise and fall, empires come and go upon the arena of history. He met with the legions of Egypt, Babylon, Greece and Rome and their powerful rulers. He saw them command obedience; he witnessed their subjugation of peoples, but he, the Jew, refused to bow down before the idolatry of their power. The Jew refused to be totalitarized. The Jew has dared to play the historic role of "the eternal Protestant." The Jew has not permitted the world to be contented as long as the world has not God.

Rightfully our talmudic literature records that the reason Mordecai refused to prostrate himself before Haman, was that Haman wore an idol over his heart and it was to the idol that people had to make obeisance. Jewish law summons the followers of the faith to bow to and worship only God, the Creator of the universe. Blessed is the Jew who refuses to bow before the time-serving qualities of idolatry and lives by the principles of truth and justice.

Indeed, Purim reminds us that the destroyer is ever destroyed. It also reminds us that the Mordecais and Esthers are always in need of followers who will gather with them in prayer and fasting as did the Jews of Shushan, and unite so that deliverance may come. But deliverance of the Jewish people is bound up with the redemption from injustice, for all mankind.

Here in Canada, medical experts and health authorities are now battling with a contagious disease that has broken out among livestock. Effective measures of quarantine are now being instituted against the spread of the hoof and mouth disease. If we could equally adopt such safeguards against destructive ideas that threaten communities and the world community! The Book of Esther records a remarkable text in this regard. "Think not within thy heart thou shalt escape in the King's house more than all the Jews." Thus spoke Mordecai to his niece, the Queen of Persia. When a destructive idea descends upon a community, no one is immune from danger. Position and wealth may postpone calamity for but awhile.

All of us in this world are in the same boat. Ours is a common interest and a common destiny. Science has indeed made of our world an intimate neighborhood. The harm perpetrated by any anti-social force is not restricted to any locality. If we are to build a genuine democracy we must institute measures by which to conquer the disease of prejudice and intolerance with which multitudes are infected. Certainly the thoughtful within Synagogue and Church must labour faithfully for a programme of sanitation in the realm of ideas, for all of us are interdependent upon one another. Because our society is so sick, men and women of good will must do all within their power to quarantine those who are carriers of spiritual pestilence.

position of heavy sentences on Jews caught attempting to smuggle across the frontier, this immigration stopped.

In 1949, however, when a false rumor swept the country that Rumania and Israel had reached an agreement whereby 100,000 Jews would be permitted to emigrate, thousands of Jews swarmed to the Israeli Legation in Bucharest for visas. Police action was necessary to force the crowds to disperse. A small flow of emigration to Israel is now permitted, but it is sporadic and the Rumanian government has made attempts to hamper it by such methods as refusing to permit elderly parents to take their children with them.

It is apparent that many Jews still wish to leave, says the Congress report. In July, 1950, Bertu Feldman, secretary general of the Democratic Committee, openly told a Committee conference that "our ties with the masses are not satisfactory . . . a portion of the working Jewish population has fallen under the influence of the agents of the nationalistic Zionists . . ."
